China Eastern Airlines starts direct flights between Fuzhou and Singapore on Saturday 12 December 2026, flying three times a week on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, the airline announced on 25 November.

The Singapore departure, MU6056, leaves Changi at 2.10pm and lands at Fuzhou Changle International Airport at 6.40pm after 4 hours 30 minutes in the air. The inbound MU6055 leaves Fuzhou at 8.30am and reaches Singapore at 1.10pm, a 4 hour 40 minute flight. All times are local, and Singapore and Fuzhou keep the same clock, so there is no time difference to work out. MU6056 leaves an hour after MU6055 lands, and both directions run on the same three days.

Planning leave around three flights a week

Fly out on a Thursday afternoon and back on Saturday, and the trip costs half a day and a Friday of leave, with you landing at Changi at 1.10pm on Saturday. Fly out on Saturday and back on Tuesday, and you get Sunday and Monday in Fuzhou for one and a half days of leave, since the Tuesday flight lands at 1.10pm.

The Saturday flight leaves after lunch and reaches Fuzhou in time for dinner. That makes it the easy one for anyone visiting family in Fujian over a long weekend.

China Easternâ??s second Southeast Asia route from Fuzhou

Fuzhou to Singapore is the second direct Southeast Asia route China Eastern plans to run from Fuzhou Changle, after Fuzhou to Kuala Lumpur. With both routes running, China Eastern is selling Fuzhou trips that fly into Singapore and home from Kuala Lumpur, or the other way round. Fuzhou is the capital of Fujian province.

Entry on a Singapore passport

Holders of ordinary Singapore passports do not need a visa for stays of up to 30 days in mainland China, under the mutual visa exemption that took effect on 9 February 2024. It is a standing agreement between the two governments with no published end date, so it applies when the new flights start. Anyone staying longer than 30 days, or going to work or report as a journalist, needs a visa before travelling.
