Concerts and music to book

Longing for Jiangnan is a return engagement. Zide Guqin Studio from China sold out What Is Qin at Huayi 2025, and comes back on 20 February 2027 at the Esplanade Concert Hall with guqin scores, Jiangnan sizhu music and folk tunes. It runs 1 hour 30 minutes with no intermission, and tickets start at S$32.

Melodies Across Generations (19 and 20 February, from S$40) has Malaysian singer Yudi Yap, the â??Songbird of Nanyangâ?•, performing the songs of composer Yao Min. For pop and rock, Taiwanese band Wendy Wander makes its headline Singapore debut on 26 February at 8pm, and Chinese rock band Soundtoy plays its first Singapore show on 28 February at 5pm.

Both band gigs are at the Esplanade Annexe Studio, standing room only, for ages 6 and above, sung in Mandarin. Tickets start at S$55, with Standard at S$68. Esplanade also lists puppiebelly (27 February, from S$55) and the MengFM 30th anniversary concert (27 February, from S$58).

Getting there and planning the weekend

Esplanade is at 1 Esplanade Drive, Singapore 038981, a short walk from Esplanade and City Hall MRT stations. The two festival weekends are 19 to 21 February and 26 to 28 February, and Chinese New Year crowds are likely, so check show times before you lock in dinner plans.

Looking for something sooner? Esplanadeâ??s Voices Festival of Song and the Nutcracker at Esplanade Theatre are both on this season. For a free year-end option, see our guide to Marina Bay Singapore Countdown 2027.

Full line-up, ticket categories and booking are on the Esplanade Huayi 2027 page.
