

Affordable Zi Char at a Hidden and Quiet Old Hawker Centre

Description

default watermark

Have you heard of Jalan Batu Hawker Centre? I didnâ??t even know where Jalan Batu was. I met my friend for dinner, and we usually go to our favorite place. However, we often end up exploring new spots in our quest for good and affordable eats.

Today, my friend suggested Jalan Batu, a place I was unfamiliar with. I decided to follow his suggestion.

Upon arrival, I realized I had driven past this place (near the Esso station) many times without noticing the hawker centre inside.

This place is truly hidden. When we arrived at 7:30 pm, 90% of the shops were closed.

Thankfully, a few shops were still open, and we discovered a zi char stall called â??Victory Canton Wokâ?• with many customers.

UNION
GROUP OF COMPANIES
#01-09
Bean Sauce Fish Head
Cereal Prawn
default watermark

At first glance, we knew this place would be good. We ordered a few dishes.

What makes good hor fun? Itâ??s stir-fried, giving it a little char with wok hei before being drenched in sauce. This was nicely done.

The Nai Bai was stir-fried with garlic and the special thing here is that they topped it fried garlic bits.

A quick Google search revealed that the Prawn Paste Chicken is a must-order.

The dishes we tried were delicious. Although it wasnâ??t a â??wowâ?• meal, the price was very reasonable. Everything amounted to S$24. Worth it? Totally yes!

Victory Canton Wok
4A Jln Batu, #01-09, Singapore 431004
Thursday â?? Monday: 11am â?? 9pm
Closed on Tuesday and Wednesday

For the latest deals and content, join our Telegram channel here today!

You May Also Like

- Sean Kee Duck Riceâ?¦ Shiok siahâ?¦
- Hamburg Steak Keisuke (Tanjong Pagar) has one of the best salad bars
- Plantiful at Gaysorn Amarin

Date Created
23/07/2024
Author
wilbersuen

default watermark