

Art Ice... Kakigori at Duxton Hill

Description

If you have ever had kakigori, you will know that the kakigori served up at Art Ice is simply not up to scratch. I genuinely had high hopes for this establishment. For one, it is rated 4.4 stars on Google. However, after visiting this place and paying for three kakigoris, I genuinely understand why some people may shun Google reviews for the simple fact that such reviews can be bought or orchestrated.

I believe this establishment's Google review is not indicative of the standard of its offering. This is my personal view and I invite those who disagree with me to explain to me why. As for the establishment, this perhaps is a call to try to improve the standard of its kakigori.

Ok so let's start from the beginning. It was a sunny Thursday afternoon. It was not too hot but my colleagues and I could do with some cool dessert. Cue the search for one. We stumbled upon Art Ice.

Image not found or type unknown

4.4 stars. Impressive. Must be more than decent. And so we went.

If there is one saving grace, I would say that the ambience of Art Ice is rather unique. It looks like a nice place for a gathering. Pleasant, centrally located and surrounded by many chic restaurant and bars.

This is the front of Art Ice.

Image not found or type unknown

When you enter the premise of Art Ice, it feels more like an art gallery than a cafe.

Image not found or type unknown

There was one other seat occupied at the time we entered the premise. There were four of us at Art Ice.

Image not found or type unknown

I love the look of conservation shophouses. There is a certain charm that is lost with all the modernisation that is taking place. The quaint look of the shophouses in the Duxton Hill area is something that I hope remains for a long time. Not everything has to be contemporary, shiny and new.

Image not found or type unknown

They take your orders at that counter.

Image not found or type unknown

The kakigoris are not what you would call affordable. One kakigori sets you back about $20. We were advised that one kakigori serves two pax. Since we were here to try, we ordered three kakigoris for four of us.

Image not found or type unknown

There was a seasonal menu item. Also a drink bar menu.

Image not found or type unknown

There are kakigoris for pets.

default watermark

Image not found or type unknown

They made the kakigoris individually and hence it took some time for all three kakigoris to be served. We were given the matcha kakigori first.

default watermark

Image not found or type unknown

I looked decent at first glance. But this is what we got. literally. It was just ice shavings with some matcha flavoured sauce with some cream on top. This costs $17 and had less ingredients than a bowl of ice kacang at Hong Lim Food Centre.

default watermark

Image not found or type unknown

No, seriously. From ever angle. This is literally it. There is nothing under that heap of ice.

default watermark

Image not found or type unknown

Next up, Dragon and Passionfruit kakigori. This similarly costs $17. This had literally two slices of green kiwi with shaved iced drizzled with dragon and passionfruit syrup.

I like how Art Ice takes the name of its kakigoris and applies it literally. If it says dragon and passionfruit, it really means only dragon and passionfruit. Nothing more. Hence I guess the two slices of kiwi are sort of a bonus.

default watermark

Image not found or type unknown

Next up, Roasted Sweet Potato kakigori. I guess the bonus here were the sesame seeds?

default watermark

Image not found or type unknown

No, seriously, it is literally ice with colouring.

default watermark

Image not found or type unknown

That is all.

default watermark

Image not found or type unknown

It is not as though I am finding words to describe something. I am trying to find something out of nothing to describe.

So maybe let's talk about the art...

I am guessing the art pieces are for sale?

Image not found or type unknown

If Art Ice is primarily an art gallery first and a kakigori cafe second, then I would understand the lack of focus on delivering decent kakigori. Perhaps it is. Perhaps it is meant to be an art gallery.

Good thing I am headed to Bangkok soon. Want to get kakigori that is possibly one of the best in the world? Head to After You cafes in Bangkok.

To the people at Art Ice, please visit After You to see what should be the benchmark for a more than decent kakigori.

THIS IS WHAT GOOD KAKIGORI IS...

Image not found or type unknown

Kakigori at After You Cafe in Bangkok

Image not found or type unknown

Kakigori at After You Cafe in Bangkok

Sadly, we still have to travel to Bangkok to get this...

I so wanted Art Ice to be great. It is walking distance from my office. If it were great, I believe this would be one of the places my colleagues and I would frequent. However, a simple chendol or ice kachang at any of the numerous food centres around the Chinatown and Maxwell area would make a better dessert. Oh and it would also be a lot cheaper.

Imagine... I paid about $60 for three bowls of ice and some syrup.

I'm sorry. If it is disappointing I think I have to call a spade a spade. Hopefully Art Ice improves on its offering.

Yours sincerely,

Daryl

Date Created

09/12/2024

Author

daryllum

default watermark