
Business Adaptation Grant: What Tariff-Hit Singapore Firms Can Use

Description

Enterprise Singaporeâ??s Business Adaptation Grant is a useful new read for companies that have been hit by tariff changes or overseas supply-chain disruption. The grant is positioned around practical adaptation work, not broad cash support: firms use it for advisory projects and, for qualifying manufacturing cases, reconfiguration support.

The headline cap is S$100,000 per enterprise. Enterprise Singapore says enhanced support of up to 70 per cent for SMEs and up to 50 per cent for non-SMEs will take effect from 1 April 2026, as announced in Budget 2026. That makes the grant worth checking before a company signs contracts for tariff, market-entry, legal or supply-chain advisory work.

What It Covers

The official page frames the grant for enterprises exporting or operating overseas that are impacted by tariff measures. Advisory support can cover free trade agreement and trade compliance, legal or contractual matters, supply-chain optimisation and market diversification. In plain terms, this is for companies trying to reduce friction, recover margin or change routes after trade conditions shift.

There is also a reconfiguration support track for manufacturing firms with at least 51 per cent ownership of manufacturing operations overseas or locally. Enterprise Singapore describes support for costs such as logistics and inventory holding when firms relocate manufacturing activities or change suppliers.

- Grant cap: S$100,000 per enterprise.
- Enhanced support from 1 April 2026: up to 70 per cent for SMEs and up to 50 per cent for non-SMEs.
- Common use cases: trade compliance, legal review, supply-chain redesign and market diversification.

How To Use It

The grant works best when the business problem is specific. A company should map the tariff exposure, identify which product lines or markets are affected, then decide whether it needs legal advice, FTA compliance work, supplier diversification or operational reconfiguration. That keeps the application tied to a clear business adaptation plan.

Start with the official Business Adaptation Grant page before speaking to vendors. For more government-support coverage, browse our Grants section.

- Prepare affected products, markets and shipment routes before applying.
- Keep vendor scopes tied to tariff adaptation rather than general consulting.
- Manufacturers should document ownership and relocation or supplier-change costs early.

Date Created
02/06/2026
Author
priya