

Dyson R3 Nurovi Spot+Scrub UV price in Singapore: S$1,699 for a robot vacuum that hunts invisible stains

Description

default watermark

The Dyson R3 Nurovi Spot+Scrub UV price in Singapore is S$1,699, and it is the most expensive robot vacuum in Dysonâ??s new Nurovi line. Dyson reports it is available from 5 November 2026 at its stores and on its website, and Harvey Norman Singapore also lists it at the same price. The pitch is simple: a UV light that shows stains your eyes cannot see, then a robot that keeps going back until they are gone.

What the Dyson R3 Nurovi Spot+Scrub UV price in Singapore gets you

This is a wet and dry robot, so it vacuums and mops in the same pass. Dyson says suction pressure is 65% higher than its previous model, and the mop is a full-width microfibre roller that is washed with 70Â°C water. On hard floors it extends about 40mm to reach skirting boards, and on carpet it lifts and suction goes up.

The dock does the dirty work. It empties the bin using 10 cyclones, stores up to 100 days of debris, washes the roller and dries it with a 55Â°C hot-air cycle. Dyson also says the robot recognises nearly 200 types of household items, including socks and cables, so it should steer around them instead of eating them.

Source: Dyson

How the invisible stain detection works

A camera, UV light and a green laser-style beam scan the floor ahead of the robot. When it spots a stain that is not visible in normal light, it cleans the area repeatedly and checks again. The MyDyson app then shows a Clean Map of where stains were found and what the robot did about them.

For most Singapore homes this sounds more useful than it looks on paper. Think dried sugary drinks on the kitchen tile, pet accidents on the living room floor, or the sticky patch under the dining table after a toddlerâ??s lunch. Whether the UV trick is a real step up or a clever demo will need a proper home test, so treat Dysonâ??s claims as claims for now.

Navigation, app and setup

The robot uses LiDAR that scans seven times a second, plus AI vision, to map your home and label rooms. A dual-laser system and adaptive software help it avoid obstacles. In the MyDyson app you can schedule targeted cleans, draw custom zones, set room-specific rules and read a report after each run.

Dyson also offers a virtual Concierge service, by appointment, to help with installation and setup. That is handy if your flat has a few tricky corners or you have never owned a robot vacuum before.

Source: Dyson

Where it sits in the Nurovi range

The R3 is the top model. The R2 Nurovi Wash+Dry has been listed at S$1,199 in Singapore, and the R1 Nurovi Dry is the entry model, with local pricing not confirmed in the sources I checked. If you only want a vacuum for HDB flooring and do not care about mopping, the cheaper models are worth a look first.

- R3 Nurovi Spot+Scrub UV: S$1,699, available from 5 November 2026
- R2 Nurovi Wash+Dry: listed at S$1,199
- R1 Nurovi Dry: Singapore price to be confirmed

Before you buy

Big-ticket appliances tend to get cheaper around Black Friday and year-end, so it may pay to wait a few weeks. We have already covered Harvey Normanâ??s early Black Friday sale, and the IKEA Family November offers are worth a glance if you are redoing the home before Christmas. Check that the Singapore listing is a local-warranty set, and ask the store for a floor demo, since how a robot copes with rug fringe varies from home to home.

Prices and availability can change, so confirm on dyson.com.sg or at a Dyson store before you commit.

Date Created

16/11/2026
Author
nuraisyah

default watermark