

Swensen's Unlimited Supper Buffet

Description

We did a review of Swensen's Unlimited before. Here is the previous post.

Since then, Swensen's Unlimited has expanded to cover supper as well. Their supper buffet is only available on Fridays and Saturdays and is only available at their Changi Airport T2 branch.

The pricing of their buffet is rather attractive as well!

Oh yes, because it kind of overlapped with their dinner servingâ€¦ there were some of the dinner options available. Hot tip, be there early for the supper buffet. My family and I were there at about 930pm and we were allowed to enter a bit earlier.

The nasi lemak was good. The rice was fragrant. However, the carrot cake was not good. Extremely oily and bland.

There is satay, ngor hiang and mutton curry.

Somehow I think I did not do the curry rice any justice. Looks rather pathetic. But this was bland as well.

Well you come to Swensenâ??s for the desserts right? There is an abundance of treats on offer. Dare I say, more than the dinner offerings?

In place of the seafood section are fruits. And not many people were helping themselves to the fruits!

Apparently Singaporeans do stay up pretty late. The whole restaurant was filled to the brim.

Of course there was ice cream. There is an ice cream bar and a gelato bar.

Here is what was on offerâ?|

By the time I realised there was lor mee I was too full already! But yes that was on the menu. I do not see it on the Swensen's page currently. I am unsure whether they removed this from the menu.

Overall this was worth it. The food was not amazing. The lack of quality was made up by the sheer variety. There is a 90 minute time limit and they did enforce the time limit when I was there. There was a queue of people waiting hence I guess it is only fair.

Starts at 10pm and the last serving is at 130am. The question is, after eating so much, how does one fall asleep?

Yours sincerely,

Daryl
