ic! berlin Racing Edition: the two designs

The collection is built around ic! berlinâ??s signature lightweight, screwless frames, with bold racing-inspired detailing. Two models make up the Singapore range:

- Ryan (S$650): pearl-coloured frames with dark grey polarised lenses and red temple tips.
- Gabriel (S$860): Sky Grey acetate fronts with Pearl metal temples and red racing-inspired accents.

Why Singapore?

The campaign is ic! berlinâ??s first with Audi Revolut F1 Team, after the German eyewear brand, owned by Marcolin, became the teamâ??s first official eyewear partner. Singapore is one of just three key international destinations, alongside Monza and Austin, where the brand is bringing the partnership trackside this season.

Lorenzo Barberio, Managing Director, APAC at Marchon Eyewear | Marcolin, said Marina Bay was a natural choice: few circuits run through the heart of a city the way it does, with a night race against the skyline.

From 0.5 mm to 300 km/h

The campaign tagline, â??From 0.5 mm to 300 km/hâ??, draws a line between ic! berlinâ??s ultra-light, flexible frames and the Audi R26 race car, which is built with lighter dimensions, active aerodynamics and sharper agility at speed. Photographer Rupert Tapper shot the images, with creative direction by visual artist Leif Podhajsky, and the motion blur in the pictures is deliberate.

Where to buy in Singapore

From 10 November, the Racing Edition is available at W Optics, Suntec City, and selected authorised optical retailers. Since 1996, ic! berlin has built its name on cold-rolled stainless-steel frames and a patented screwless hinge, and the brand is sold in more than 125 countries.
