

Jetstar Perth-Singapore Service Ending: What Travellers Should Check

Description

Jetstar's Perth-Singapore service update is one to check if you have Western Australia plans later in 2026. Jetstar's notice says its Perth-Singapore service will end, with the last service on Saturday, 24 October 2026.

For readers who track Changi options after our Jewel Changi guide, this is the less fun but more important part of travel planning: routes can change after you start building an itinerary.

Who Should Pay Attention

Travellers with existing bookings after the final service date should read Jetstar's instructions carefully rather than assuming the airline will automatically match their preferred alternative. The right next step depends on booking channel, fare type, travel date and whether the route is part of a wider itinerary.

If Perth is still the goal, compare direct flights, one-stop options, refund paths and accommodation flexibility. The route change can affect hotel nights, car rental dates and domestic Australian connections.

How To Use The Festival Well

Check the airline notice, then check the booking record in the same channel you used to buy the ticket. If you booked through a travel agent or online travel platform, that platform may control part of the change or refund process.

Do not only compare headline fares. Add baggage, seat fees, arrival time, connection risk and hotel-night changes. A cheap alternative can become more expensive if it lands at an awkward hour or requires another overnight stop.
