

Keitaku Mazesoba at Vivocity has an attractive grand opening promotion

Description

Mazesoba is a brothless Japanese noodle dish. I liken it to the Japanese version of Singapore's bar chor mee. Essentially you get all the noodles with the ingredients displayed neatly on the top. You then mix it up. So yes, you have to do the mixing but the bar chor mee you get at the hawker centers come pre-mixed. In my personal opinion, they are very similar.

So there is a new Keitaku Mazesoba open at Vivocity. I believe there are two other outlets. One at Marina Square and another at Hillion Mall. I've walked past the Marina Square one but never ventured to Hillion Mall before...

Oh and there is an attractive promotion. Buy 2 bowls of Mazesoba and you will get 1 free! You also get free noodle refills. Take note, the promotion is only until the 19th of March 2025.

Here is the menu. It looked like a great deal with free hard-boiled eggs and soup.

These were their best sellers. They placed this permanently at the entrance.

KEITAKU
MAMESOBA
日式拌面

招牌干拌日式拉面 M1
SIGNATURE MAMESOBA
$13.9**

三文鱼明太鱼籽干拌日式拉面 M2
SALMON MENTAI IKURA MAMESOBA
$16.9**

超级蒜香叉烧干拌日式拉面 M3
SUPER GARLIC CHARSIEW MAMESOBA
$15.9**

FREE!
HARD-BOILED EGG & SOUP

TOP 1
TOP 2
TOP 3

** PRICES DISPLAYED ARE SUBJECT TO 10% SERVICE CHARGE AND 7% PREVALENT TAX
ALL PICTURES SHOWN ARE FOR ILLUSTRATION PURPOSE ONLY

Time to load up on some protein.

default watermark

One thing to note about the soup. It was more peppery than umami. It was not very good but it was free and you could get free top ups. The soup reminded me of the type of soup you would get from the noodle stall at the hawker centres. Spoiler alert, I do think that this Mazesoba is more like bar chor mee

default watermark

than anything Japanese.

This is the Teriyaki Chicken Mentai Mazesoba.

This is the Signature Mazesoba.

As you can see, the noodles that are being used is the yellow egg noodles that you can find at noodle shops at coffeeshops and hawker centers selling bar chor mee.

The noodles for Mazesoba need to be thick and able to absorb the various sauces within the dish. The thing about the typical yellow egg noodles is that it does not do such a good job of absorbing the flavors of the ingredients. If it does, the flavor of the noodles itself seems to mask it.

Oh as I am vegetarian, I got the Mala Tofu Mazedoba. I could not finish this as it was too spicy. If you cannot take excessive spice, this should not be an option for you.

default watermark

I had previously reviewed another Mazesoba outlet at Suntec. This is the review:
<https://littlebigreddot.com/tokyo-mazesoba-at-menya-kokoro/>

As a suggestion to Keitaku, perhaps you can try using this type of noodles? This is the type of noodles that Menya Kokoro uses and I think it does a wonderful job of absorbing flavors.

default watermark

All things considered, $13.90 for a bowl of Masesoba is a great deal. With the promotion, it makes it an even more compelling proposition. However, if you think of it as a bowl of bar chor mee, then it is overpriced. To me, the key is the type of noodles that is used.

Hey, maybe just go and give it a try and see how it works for you.

Yours sincerely,

Daryl

Date Created

24/02/2025

Author

daryllum

default watermark