

Monaco Grand Prix 2026 Preview: Antonelli, Russell, Norris and Verstappen Eye Principality Glory

Description

The greatest show in motorsport returns to its most iconic stage this weekend. The Monaco Grand Prix 2026 takes place on Sunday 31 May, and with a brand-new technical era in full swing, the streets of the Principality promise a fascinating spectacle. In a season where the pecking order has already shifted dramatically, the F1 Monaco 2026 race could be a decisive moment in the championship narrative with Kimi Antonelli, George Russell, Lando Norris, and Max Verstappen all targeting glory under the Mediterranean sky.

Monaco Grand Prix 2026: The Circuit, the Format, and What Makes It Unmissable

The Circuit de Monaco runs 3.337 kilometres through the narrow, barrier-lined streets of Monte Carlo. At just 78 laps, it is one of the shortest race distances on the calendar in terms of overall circuit length, yet it consistently delivers some of the most intense, nerve-shredding racing of the season. Overtaking is notoriously difficult – qualifying on Saturday is therefore more critical here than anywhere else, and a front-row start is worth its weight in gold.

The 2026 technical regulations have introduced a significant aerodynamic philosophy shift across the grid. Smaller, lighter cars with revised front-wing geometry are the order of the day, and early indications suggest the tighter, more mechanical setup required for Monaco suits the mid-speed, high-downforce configuration that teams like Mercedes and McLaren have been quietly perfecting through the opening rounds.

Monaco Grand Prix 2026 circuit aerial view of the harbour section
The iconic Monaco Harbour section – still the most breathtaking stretch in Formula 1. ©
Formula 1

Kimi Antonelli, Russell, Norris, Verstappen – Who Wins Monaco 2026?

Kimi Antonelli has been the revelation of the 2026 season. The 19-year-old Mercedes driver has already demonstrated stunning pace and maturity well beyond his years, and his natural feel for mechanical grip makes him a serious threat on a circuit that punishes any lapse in concentration. Monaco will be his first time racing here at the wheel of a competitive car, and the pressure and the opportunity could not be higher.

George Russell knows Monaco intimately. The Briton has raced here throughout his career and has consistently outperformed expectations on this circuit. With Mercedes arriving in strong form and the 2026 car seemingly well-suited to the Principality, Russell will be gunning for pole on Saturday and a measured, controlled race win on Sunday.

Lando Norris and McLaren come into Monaco off the back of a strong run of results, and the Woking team's consistent setup improvements through 2026 have given Norris a car capable of challenging for victory on any surface. The British driver is one of the smoothest operators through the tunnel and the chicane, and should feature prominently in both qualifying and the race.

Max Verstappen and Red Bull, meanwhile, remain the benchmark against which all rivals are measured. Despite early-season reliability headaches, Verstappen has shown his characteristic resilience and the Dutchman has a deep understanding of Monaco's demands after years of racing through its streets. A motivated Verstappen at Monaco is never to be discounted.

Kimi Antonelli driving the Mercedes F1 car at Monaco Grand Prix 2026
Kimi Antonelli brings youthful brilliance and raw pace to Monaco this weekend. © Formula 1

Monaco Grand Prix 2026: Schedule, Start Time, and How to Watch

The full Monaco Grand Prix 2026 weekend schedule (all times Singapore SGT / UTC+8) is as follows:

- Saturday 30 May – Qualifying: 9:00 pm SGT (1:00 pm local)
- Sunday 31 May – Race: 9:00 pm SGT (1:00 pm local)

Singapore viewers can follow the Monaco Grand Prix 2026 live on beIN Sports. International streaming options include Formula 1's own F1 TV Pro platform, which provides commentary-free onboard feeds, live timing data, and driver radio alongside the main race broadcast.

For the full season picture, check our Sports section for ongoing Formula 1 coverage through 2026. And if you want the latest on all the other big sporting moments happening this weekend – including the PSG vs Arsenal UCL Final in Budapest – we have you covered across the board.

Date Created

29/05/2026

Author

jadeyeo

default watermark