Last year's edition proved a massive hit with Singapore fans, selling out OCBC Arena across multiple sessions and generating enormous excitement around the sport locally. The 2026 edition promises to be even bigger, with BAS confirming a newly announced lineup featuring some of the most recognisable rising names in the NBA right now.

Format, Schedule and What to Expect

The invitational format sees players split into teams for a round-robin competition before knockout semifinals and a championship final on 28 June – giving fans a full week of action. BAS will release full matchday schedules and team assignments in the days ahead of the tournament opening on 23 June.

Whether you are a lifelong basketball fan or new to the sport, this is the kind of event that converts casual onlookers into devoted followers. Seeing NBA-calibre athletes compete live is a rare treat in Singapore, and the OCBC Arena's intimate setting means fans are always close to the action.

Singapore Basketball Is Growing Fast

The NBA Rising Stars Invitational's return to Singapore reflects the real growth of basketball on the island. BAS has been working tirelessly to develop the sport at both grassroots and elite levels from youth academies and school programmes to national teams competing at regional level. Singapore's national youth sides have shown considerable improvement at recent ASEAN-level competitions, and events like the Rising Stars Invitational serve a dual purpose: entertaining existing fans and inspiring a new generation of young players.

Tickets and How to Attend

Tickets are available through the BAS official website at bas.org.sg. Given how quickly last year's event sold out, early booking is strongly advised. Sessions run from 23 to 28 June at OCBC Arena ideal for families, friend groups, and corporate outings. This is your chance to experience world-class basketball without catching a flight to the United States.
