

Premier League Plus Singapore: What Fans Get For The 2026/27 Season

Description

There was no Premier League weekend matchday to recap on Monday, 15 June 2026, so Singapore fans get the more useful off-season update: Premier League Plus is being lined up as a new way to watch the 2026/27 season here.

The service matters because it is Singapore-specific. It is not just another global streaming note for overseas fans; the Premier League lists Singapore as the market for the platform, with access planned through its app, website, connected-TV app and selected StarHub set-top boxes.

What Is Included

The headline item is simple: live streams of all 380 Premier League matches in the 2026/27 season. The same package is also described as covering Emirates FA Cup matches, including matches from the third round to the final, plus the FA Community Shield.

For fans who cannot watch every late kickoff live, the practical value is the on-demand layer. The Premier League lists full-match replays, short and extended highlights, and a 24/7 Premier League channel with analysis, interviews and documentaries.

- Access is planned through annual, monthly and 24-hour passes.
- Streams are listed for mobile devices, laptops and connected TVs.
- The 2026/27 fixtures page is already the page to bookmark once match dates populate.

Why Singapore Fans Should Note It Now

The key local detail is StarHub. Existing StarHub customers are described as continuing to get live Premier League and FA Cup matches as part of their subscription, with Premier League Plus integrated into the StarHub platform.

That means Singapore fans should not treat this as a replacement assumption yet. It is a new access layer with flexible passes, while StarHub subscribers will want to compare what their package already includes before buying an extra pass.

The Off-Season Watch

The next reader job is to watch the Little Big Red Dot Sports feed and the Premier League fixtures page once the opening-weekend schedule becomes visible. Until then, the useful takeaway is platform access, not scoreline analysis.

For Singapore viewers, the biggest upgrade to track is whether the 24-hour pass makes one-off late-night matches easier to buy without committing to a full season.
