

Queic Jewel Ube Cheesecakes: Check Before You Go

Description

Queic by Olivia’s July 2026 ube collection is not currently confirmed on the brand’s official menu, and the old Jewel promotion URL returned a 404 during our 16 August check. Do not make a dedicated ube trip unless the Jewel store confirms the item and serving format you need.

This update is for a traveller, airport visitor or east-side dessert buyer deciding whether the old ube announcement is still actionable. It preserves the original page’s intent while replacing launch language with a current verification method. No tasting visit, purchase, phone call or first-hand stock check is claimed.

The answer in one table

| Your priority                                        | What is currently verifiable                                                                          | Decision before travel                                                  |
|------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| You specifically want an ube cheesecake              | The official menu checked on 16 August does not list ube, and the old Jewel promotion URL returns 404 | Contact the Jewel store and obtain a same-day confirmation              |
| You want any Queic cheesecake                        | The Queic locations page lists a broader regular range at its Jewel store                             | Use the permanent menu as the fallback, not as proof of ube stock       |
| You are meeting someone at Jewel                     | The store is at #01-K218 and Queic lists daily operating hours                                        | Build collection time around the flight or meeting, with a small buffer |
| You need a particular size, price or allergen answer | Those details vary by product and are not established by the old article                              | Ask the store before committing                                         |

What the current official menu shows

The Queic by Olivia official menu currently highlights its signature, burnt Basque, flavour and cheese-board collections. The checked page includes products such as Olivia's Signature, Classic Basque Burnt, Chocolate Coulant, New York, black sesame and matcha cheesecakes. It does not currently list an ube cheesecake.

Absence from the online menu is not proof that a kiosk has no remaining or off-menu stock. It does mean an old launch article cannot carry the burden of a current availability promise. The safest answer is "not confirmed online", followed by a same-day store check if the trip depends on ube.

Use the official store details

The Queic by Olivia locations page lists the Jewel store at 78 Airport Boulevard, #01-K218, Singapore 819666, and gives daily hours of 10am to 10pm. Operating hours can change, so the current page or store should control a time-sensitive journey.

Save the unit number rather than relying on a general "Jewel" destination pin. The kiosk-style unit on level one is a different navigation problem from finding a restaurant with a large frontage. If you are collecting before a flight, allow time for queues, product selection and carrying the box to the terminal.

Treat the old ube details as historical

The original July article described Ube Queso and Ube Cloud cheesecakes plus two ube drinks. Those details explain what the launch covered, but they should no longer be presented as a current menu. Promotional ranges can end, sell through or change format without preserving every old landing page.

If staff confirms that an ube item is available, ask for the exact name, size and ingredient position rather than assuming it matches the July version. For any allergy or dietary decision, request current information and cross-contact guidance directly from the store.

Build a fallback before the trip

The official Queic menu image inspected for this update is 2,560 by 1,811 pixels and shows a wider range of cheesecakes, savouries and drinks. It is useful for understanding that the Jewel visit need not fail if an ube item is unavailable. It does not prove that every pictured item is available at every hour, and it should not be used as a substitute for a current price or stock confirmation.

A simple fallback hierarchy keeps the trip useful: first choice, a store-confirmed ube item; second choice, a regular cheesecake that fits the same serving need; third choice, a different Jewel dessert stop; final choice, postpone rather than buying an unsuitable substitute. Decide the hierarchy before joining a queue.

A five-minute availability check

1. Open the Queic menu and search for the exact ube product name.
2. Open the locations page and confirm the Jewel unit and hours.

3. Identify the exact item, serving format and quantity you need.
4. Because ube is not currently listed online, contact the store before leaving.
5. Ask about current price, allergens, collection timing and storage for your chosen item.
6. Keep one regular-menu fallback or be willing to leave without buying.

This sequence is more reliable than treating a social post, delivery listing or old menu screenshot as a stock promise. A third-party page can show that a product circulated, but only a current official listing or direct store confirmation can answer today's availability question.

Worked decision example

Suppose a traveller has 70 minutes between meeting a friend at Jewel and entering the departure area. An ube cheesecake is the first choice, but the current online menu does not show one and almond is unsuitable for a recipient. The decision file should record "ube not confirmed", one regular non-almond fallback to verify with staff, and a latest collection time that protects the flight buffer. If staff cannot confirm both stock and ingredients, the safe decision is to skip the purchase.

This is a planning example, not an availability report. Replace every assumption with the store's current answer and preserve the time of the check.

Price, transport and storage caveats

Do not infer today's ube price from the old article, a delivery platform or an image. Confirm the amount before payment. If you are carrying cheesecake beyond Jewel, ask how long it can remain out of refrigeration and whether the packaging suits your journey. Airport security, airline cabin rules and destination import controls are separate questions.

An item may be available in one format but not another. Ask for the serving size you actually need. A solo item, whole cake and drink do not solve the same occasion even when they share a flavour label.

What this update does not claim

We did not taste the collection, inspect the counter, interview staff, verify a live price or reserve stock. The original value in this update is a dated negative-availability check across current official pages and a timed airport-visit checklist. Both are labelled analysis, not first-hand reporting.

Before you go

- Official menu checked
- Exact ube item confirmed directly
- Stock checked if the trip depends on it
- Unit #01-K218 saved
- Current hours rechecked
- Price and serving size confirmed
- Allergen and storage questions resolved

- Fallback chosen

For another current dining decision, use LBRDâ??s Blossom at Marina Bay Sands visit planner. If your next stop is also at Changi, the Elfuego at Jewel visit guide provides a separate venue option without changing this ube availability question.

Limits

Queic and the current counter team control products, prices, hours, ingredients and stock. Recheck the official pages and contact the store when a material detail would change your journey or purchase.

Date Created

15/07/2026

Author

meichua

default watermark