

Restaurant Zen Renewal Closure: What Diners Should Know From June

Description

Restaurant Zen has closed from 2 June 2026 for a period of renewal, according to the notice on its official website. The restaurant says a new chapter is taking shape and that it will return in a more contemporary and intimate form.

For diners, the important point is practical: this is not a normal reservation blackout or a short holiday closure. The restaurant is positioning the pause as a renewal of space, hospitality and storytelling, while keeping the DNA that made Zen one of Asia's most acclaimed dining rooms.

What The Notice Says

The official message says Zen will close for a period of renewal from 2 June. It adds that the restaurant will return with architecture, hospitality and storytelling coming together in a renewed expression.

The site still directs enquiries to reservations@restaurantzen.com, which is useful for diners with existing questions, voucher matters or future planning. However, the notice does not list a confirmed reopening date.

- Closure start: 2 June 2026.
- Reason: period of renewal.
- Positioning: a more contemporary and intimate form.
- Contact: reservations@restaurantzen.com.

Why Diners Should Care

Zen is part of Bjorn Frantzen's restaurant group and has been associated with three Michelin stars in Singapore. A closure of this kind therefore matters beyond one meal slot because it can affect anniversary bookings, destination-dining plans and visiting food travellers.

If you were planning a special-occasion dinner, do not assume another month of tables will appear. Treat the renewal period as an open-ended pause until the restaurant announces its next reservation window.

Planning Notes

Diners should watch the official site and mailing list rather than relying on old reservation habits. When Zen returns, the dining room, timing and experience may not map perfectly to previous visits.
