

Singapore Airlines Sapporo flights: daily from 30 November 2026

Description

default watermark

Singapore Airlines Sapporo flights are back for the 2026/27 ski season, and this winterâ??s run is the longest yet, starting 30 November 2026 and running to the end of February 2027. Flights are daily through December and January, then drop to three a week in February. That matters if you are eyeing Hokkaido powder, the Snow Festival or the Chinese New Year break.

Source: Sapporo Snow Festival

Singapore Airlines Sapporo flights: schedule and aircraft

The seasonal service uses flight numbers SQ660 and SQ661 on an Airbus A350 Medium Haul with 303 seats, in Economy and Business. These details come from airline schedule filings reported by aviation trade sites, so confirm timings when you book. Schedules can still shift.

- SQ660 leaves Singapore at 11.15pm and lands at New Chitose Airport at 7.30am, about 7 hours 15 minutes.
- SQ661 leaves Sapporo at 9.30am and reaches Singapore at 5.05pm, about 8 hours 35 minutes.
- 30 November 2026 to 27 January 2027: one flight a day.

- 30 January to 28 February 2027: three flights a week.

The red-eye out means you land in the morning with a full first day on the slopes or in the city. Coming home, you arrive in time for dinner.

Dates that line up with the school and festival calendar

February is new this year. Previous seasons stopped at the end of January, so the extension now covers Chinese New Year on 6 February 2027 and the Sapporo Snow Festival period. The festivalâ??s official site shows the 2025 edition ran from 4 to 11 February across the Odori, Susukino and Tsudome sites, but the 2027 dates were not yet published when we checked.

With only three weekly flights in February, pick your travel days early. Daily flights in December and January are the easier fit for year-end school holidays.

default watermark

Source: Sapporo Snow Festival

What it costs, and how to compare

We could not confirm current fares from an official source, so check SIAâ??s booking page for live prices. For a rough idea, one trade report from December 2025 saw return Economy fares from Singapore at around S$2,395 and Business from S$4,495. Treat that as a snapshot only, because winter fares move with demand.

KrisFlyer members can also redeem miles. The same report listed one-way Economy Saver awards at 25,500 miles and Business Saver at 54,500, plus taxes. Award space is limited, so do not count on it for peak dates.

Other ways to reach Hokkaido

Scoot flies to Sapporo via Taipei on a Boeing 787-8. The service is normally four times weekly and rises to daily from 21 November 2026, according to the same trade report. Journey time is over 10 hours each way because of the stop, so you trade time for a lower fare.

Whichever airline you choose, plan the shopping side too. Japan changed its tourist tax-free system on 1 November, and we explain how the airport refund works in our Japan tax-free shopping refund guide. If you are comparing promotions for other trips, our Scoot Black Friday travel periods breakdown shows which destinations open when.

Before you book

- Check your passport is valid for the length of your stay, and confirm current entry rules on Japanâ??s official sites.
- Book accommodation near Sapporo Station or Susukino if you want the festival sites within walking distance.
- Allow for the 11.15pm departure when planning your last day of work or school.

default watermark

Date Created
26/11/2026
Author
sofiapereira