Singapore Airlines Western Sydney flights begin on 23 November 2026, with one daily service between Changi and the new Western Sydney International Airport (WSI). SQ201 leaves Singapore at 11.30am and lands at 10.20pm, so you can work a morning and still reach Sydney the same night. It is a new option for Singapore travellers heading to Sydney, and it is worth understanding before you click book.

The flights are subject to regulatory approvals, per the airlineâ??s announcement. Check singaporeair.com for the latest before you commit.

Singapore Airlines Western Sydney flights: the schedule

For the first season, from 23 November 2026 to 27 March 2027, the times are:

- SQ201: Singapore 11.30am, arrives Western Sydney 10.20pm
- SQ202: Western Sydney 11.55pm, arrives Singapore 5.05am the next day

From 28 March 2027, SQ201 moves to an 11.35am departure, and the arrival and return times shift slightly with daylight saving in Australia. Flights run on the Airbus A350-900. SIA keeps its existing Sydney Kingsford Smith (SYD) services, so Sydney still has other flight options.

The late departure from WSI is the notable bit. The airport is planned to run 24 hours without a curfew, which is why an 11.55pm takeoff is possible.

The airport is already open

WSI opened to passengers on 25 October 2026, when the first commercial flight took off. SIAâ??s flights follow about a month later, so the terminal has had a few weeks to settle in.

How far is it from where you are staying?

This is the main thing to weigh. WSI is out west, not next to the harbour. SIAâ??s own map gives these drive times to the airport:

- Liverpool: 20 minutes
- Penrith: 25 minutes
- Parramatta: 30 minutes
- Olympic Park: 35 minutes
- Sydney CBD: 45 minutes

Treat those as best-case figures, because traffic changes everything. If your hotel is in the CBD or the eastern suburbs, give yourself more buffer than you would at SYD.

Getting to and from WSI

By car, you take the toll-free M12 Motorway. SIAâ??s page also says free buses run every 30 minutes between St Marys train and bus interchange and the airport kerbside. Grab-style rides and taxis are the other options, but confirm the fare and pick-up point with your hotel for a late-night arrival.

Who should book it?

It will not suit everyone, and that is fine. Sydney now has two airports, so the better choice depends on where you are sleeping and how late you are happy to travel.

1. Visitors staying in Parramatta, Penrith, Liverpool or the Blue Mountains side, where WSI is the closer airport.
2. Travellers who want a same-day connection with a mid-morning Changi departure.
3. Anyone happy to arrive at night and head straight to a hotel.

If you are staying in the CBD, compare the total door-to-door time against an SYD flight before choosing. A cheaper fare can disappear into a long late-night ride.

What the timing means for your trip

An 11.30am departure from Changi is kind to anyone who does not fancy a dawn check-in. You can have breakfast at home, reach the airport mid-morning and still be in Sydney for a late dinner on arrival. The flip side is a 10.20pm landing, so by the time you clear immigration and collect your bags, you will likely reach your hotel well after 11pm.

The return is the opposite. SQ202 leaves at 11.55pm and lands in Singapore at 5.05am, which suits a full last day in Sydney with a hotel checkout, but not a quiet Monday morning. Plan leave days around that early-morning arrival.

Plan your last night in Sydney

- Work out your hotel checkout and bag storage, since you will be out until the late evening.
- Leave the city by around 8pm if you are in the CBD, to allow for the 45 minute drive and check-in.
- Keep your boarding pass, passport and any Australian entry document on your phone and in hand for the arrival queue.

Before you book

Check the exact flight times and fare conditions on SIAâ??s site, because schedules can move.
