

SkillsFuture Enterprise Credit 2026: What Employers Should Use Before It Expires

Description

default watermark

SkillsFuture Enterprise Credit 2026 matters because the support expires on 30 November 2026. Eligible employers receive a one-off S$10,000 credit that can support up to 90% of out-of-pocket expenses on qualifying enterprise transformation and workforce capability programmes.

The immediate job for HR teams and SME owners is to check whether the credit appears in Business Grants Portal or SkillsFuture for Business, then decide which projects can realistically be completed before the deadline. The credit is useful only when it is attached to a concrete training or transformation plan, not left for a last-minute claim.

Who Should Check It

EnterpriseSG says eligible employers have been notified, and there is no separate application just to receive the credit. If the company qualifies, the registered Corppass administrator should be able to see the S$10,000 credit when logging into the relevant government portals.

That makes this especially relevant for firms planning job redesign, digital adoption, service training, productivity projects or structured workforce upgrading in 2026. It is also worth checking alongside other support schemes, because SFEC is designed to sit on top of existing schemes rather than replace them.

EnterpriseSG includes business case studies to show how firms use capability support.

Dates And Practical Checks

The date to remember is 30 November 2026. Employers should work backwards from that deadline and allow time for vendor selection, internal approval, course scheduling, claims and project paperwork.

Before committing spend, check that the programme is eligible, that the company has enough credit balance, and that the person submitting claims has Corppass access. A simple internal tracker with project owner, claim route and expected completion date will prevent this from becoming a forgotten finance item.

The credit is meant to support both business transformation and employee capability building.

Official details: SkillsFuture Enterprise Credit.

For more Singapore guides, see our recent notes on career choices, family outings and technology changes.

Date Created
15/05/2026
Author
rachelng