What to Expect at This Yearâ??s Show

Smart Lighting and Home Automation

Smart lighting remains one of the most accessible entry points into home automation, and you can expect a wide selection of bulbs, light strips, and switches compatible with Google Home, Amazon Alexa, and Apple HomeKit. Look out for Matter-certified devices, which allow seamless cross-brand compatibility â?? a huge quality-of-life improvement for Singapore households juggling multiple smart ecosystems.

AI-Powered Appliances

The AI home appliance segment is growing rapidly. Expect to see the latest AI-powered air purifiers, washing machines with auto-dosing, and refrigerators that can track food expiry dates. For Singaporeâ??s humid climate, air quality monitors and dehumidifiers with smart controls are always popular picks at tech shows.

Security and Smart Doorbells

Video doorbells, smart locks, and AI security cameras with facial recognition have become mainstream products in Singapore over the past two years. The Smart Home Tech Show typically features competitive pricing from brands like Eufy, Arlo, and Reolink, making it a great time to upgrade your home security.

Exclusive Show Deals and Bundles

One of the main draws of the Smart Home Tech Show is the exhibition-exclusive pricing. Brands typically offer bundle deals â?? for example, a smart home starter kit (hub + two smart bulbs + a smart plug) at a significant discount over retail. With exhibitors competing for your dollar in a concentrated space, it is worth walking the entire floor before committing to any purchase.

Tips for Getting the Most Out of the Show

Arrive early on the first day (30 April) if you are hunting for the best deals â?? popular items sell out quickly. Bring a tote bag for brochures and freebies, and download the Suntec Singapore app beforehand to get a floor plan.

If you are just starting your smart home journey, consider asking exhibitors to demonstrate how their products integrate with your existing setup. Most booths will have staff happy to walk you through compatibility questions.
