The dates and prices above come from the hotelâ??s current promotion record. Menus, stocks and reservations can change, so treat the table as a dated decision aid rather than a guarantee of a table or dish.

Use the calendar before the menu

The brunch is the narrowest option: it runs only on 8 and 9 August from noon to 3pm. The striploin, sharing platter, cakes and il Cielo dishes have wider windows, but they do not all run at the same restaurant or every day. Start with the date you can attend, then remove the unavailable branches.

This prevents a common booking error: choosing a dish from the promotion page and assuming it is offered during any meal period. Save the dated offer page and confirm the restaurant in the reservation notes.

Calculate the family brunch before drinks

For two adults and two children aged 6â??12, the published base is S$192++: 2 Ã? S$61 plus 2 Ã? S$35. This is an LBRD calculation from the hotelâ??s listed prices, before service charge, GST and optional drinks. A family with children aged 3â??5 would use the S$25++ child price instead. Official brunch prices and age bands.

Do not compare S$192++ directly with a nett package. Convert both to the same basis using the restaurantâ??s final bill rules, and confirm how the venue treats birthdays, dietary requests and no-shows.

Choose Opus Grill for the steak branch

The free-flow 250g striploin offer is listed at S$61++ per person through 31 August. The hotel gives dinner daily from 6pm to 10.30pm and Sunday lunch from noon to 3pm for this offer. That makes it the broadest full-meal branch, but â??free-flowâ?• still needs a time allowance and current service conditions.

The official Opus page states that dinnerâ??s last order is 9.45pm and tables have a two-hour dining allocation. It also says promotions are non-stackable and the restaurant is cashless. Opus Bar and Grillâ??s official operating details.

Choose the sharing platter for a clearer total

The Opus Bar Go Local platter is S$61 nett and includes two cocktails or two pints of Tiger Beer according to the promotion page. â??Nettâ?• makes the published amount easier to compare with the â??++â?• meal options, though substitutions and availability still need confirmation.

This branch suits diners who want a shared snack-style visit, not a full buffet. Ask whether non-alcoholic substitutions are available rather than assuming the package can be changed.

Use D9 when the task is takeaway

D9 Cakery lists six locally inspired Kueh-kes at S$12 nett each, S$22 for two, S$32 for three or S$61 for a set of six. The same official page lists a S$15 nett mutton rendang pie through August and other date-specific items. Current D9 offer details.

Check stock before travelling because the hotel marks the programme as limited-time. For a gift, confirm refrigeration, collection time and allergen information rather than relying on the flavour name alone.

Use il Cielo only on its listed days il Cieloâ??s Laksa Pasta and Chilli Crab Pizza are listed at S$39++ each from Tuesday to Saturday through 31 August. This is the right branch when the specific dish and rooftop Italian setting matter more than a buffet format.

The two dish names do not establish ingredient suitability. Ask the restaurant directly about shellfish, pork, alcohol, vegetarian adaptation and cross-contact.

Run the booking decision tree

default watermark

1. If the visit must be 8 or 9 August and a buffet-style family meal is wanted, price the brunch.
2. If steak is central and another August date is easier, check the Opus Grill sitting.
3. If two diners want a defined nett package, ask about the sharing platter.
4. If the task is takeaway, check D9 stock.
5. If Laksa Pasta or Chilli Crab Pizza is the draw, book il Cielo on a listed day.

Before paying, confirm the date, outlet, meal period, tax basis, cancellation terms and any non-stackable restriction. The official Opus page explicitly says its promotions cannot be stacked. Opus promotion conditions.

Questions diners ask

Is the old 20% dining claim the current SG61 offer?

No. The current official page lists specific August dishes, packages and prices; use those live terms.

Does S$61++ mean S$61 final?

No. â??++â?• indicates service charge and GST are added. A nett price is presented differently.

Can I combine another dining discount?

The official Opus page says the listed promotions are non-stackable. Confirm the exact booking before payment.
